Summit topics included health care without going bankrupt, choosing the right doctor, and staying out of the emergency room. Shuttle service, free day care, lunch and prizes were included. Dr. Caine also gave an informative synopsis on the H1N1 status. She distributed an H1N1 information chart and a pamphlet “The Flu and You, H1N1: A New Virus.” She stated that the cases of H1N1 are predicted to be more severe that previously reported. Two hundred million doses of the vaccine will be distributed throughout the country. There will also be a nasal mist vaccine. Pregnant women, individuals with certain chronic diseases as well as individuals over fifty years of age cannot receive the nasal mist vaccine. All individuals should be immunized but it is highly recommended the immunization of children and college students take precedence due to the occurrences of H1N1 in schools and colleges. Health care professionals and other medical workers will be the first to be immunized due to their high exposure to individuals who are ill. The Scientific Advisory Committee, chaired by Dr. Kenneth Fife, recommends children be the first to be immunized and also recommends the use of surgical masks. Immunizations will be conducted in all Indianapolis Public Schools. Plans are in process to also immunize catholic, private and charter school attendees. Volunteers are needed and will include individuals from hospitals, Well Point, Eli Lilly as well as other areas. Volunteers are also needed for the MCHD Call Center. The vaccine is expected to be delivered to Indiana by late September or early October. Extensive discussion ensued regarding H1N1.
Jessica Barth, WHS chief counsel and vice president, Legal Services, participated in a conference sponsored by the American Bar Association. One conference focus was innovative ways to reach individuals with HIV/AIDS. The conference attendees were presented with stories of work that is already being done in this area. Also explored was the possibility of legal and medical partnerships.

Lee Ann Blue, WHS chief nursing officer, announced that WHS would conduct a Environmental Service Week.

There was no further business so the meeting was adjourned.
